Welcome to
The Fifth Annual Ruberg Symposium

Welcome to the Fifth Annual Ruberg Symposium, a celebration of Dr. Robert Ruberg’s lifelong service to all of us. We hope that this will be a wonderful time of professional and personal enjoyment for the Ohio State University Plastic Surgery family.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this activity, learners will be able to:

- Describe the advantages and disadvantages of the different types of migraine treatment.
- List currently available breast implant shape options and describe methods for selecting appropriate devices for the patient seeking breast augmentation.
- List the structural and application differences between the newer shaped form-stable gel implants and the traditional round gel implants in breast reconstruction.
- Describe the risks and benefits of high volume autologous fat transplantation when used in breast augmentation procedures.
- Describe methods for proper harvesting, handling, and transfer of fat to optimize survival of transferred cells in patients undergoing autologous fat transfer for breast and/or gluteal augmentation procedures.
- Select the body contouring procedure that is most appropriate for the patient and part of the body that is being addressed. Specifically, addressing the appropriate pre-op work-up and safety measures, as it relates to length of surgery and hypothermia and DVT risk.
- Discuss issues common to implant reconstruction in the obese patient and implementing strategies to prevent them.
- Evaluate the systematic and financial challenges associated with microsurgical breast reconstruction.
- Identify the major airway issues that are typically overlooked during cosmetic rhinoplasty and describe surgical techniques to address them.
- Distinguish the most common forms of craniosynostosis and the current surgical management for each.
